

Measuring Occupational Prestige on the 2012 General Social Survey

October, 2014

Introduction

This is the fourth in NORC's studies of occupational prestige. First, the North-Hatt study was conducted in 1947. Second, the Hodge-Siegel-Rossi (HSR) studies were carried out in 1963-1965. Third, the 1989 General Social Survey (GSS) replicated and extended the HSR studies. Finally, the HSR studies were again replicated and extended on the 2012 GSS. Each study measured occupational prestige for a large number of occupations on a nationally-representative sample of adults in the United States. For the studies from the 1960s onward, a key goal was to measure the occupational prestige of a sufficiently large number of occupations to allow the calculation of occupational prestige for each occupational code in the latest US Census occupational codes (respectively those used in 1960, 1980, and 2010).

Samples

The occupational prestige module was administered to the 2008 GSS reinterview panel in 2012. Of the 1295 respondents, 205 could not do the task because they were interviewed on the phone and 89 gave either Don't Knows (11) or No Answers (78) to all occupations. The all No Answers cases included mostly respondents who declined to do the task, but also some who were illiterate, had impaired sight, and cases that had been reassigned to a new interviewer but the occupational prestige packet had not been transferred to the new interviewer before the interview was completed. That left 1001 respondents rating at least some occupations. Some occupations (20) were administered to all respondents, but most (840) appeared in only one of 12 sub-samples (see Table 1).

In addition to the across-the-board missing data, there were item-specific, missing data. For the 20 core occupations these ranged from 0.3% to 1.9% with a median level of 1.0%. For the 840 sub-set occupations item non-response ranged from 0.0% to 23.7%. The occupations with the highest item-specific, missing data levels were:

|------------------------------|-------|
| Skycap | 23.7% |
| Lathe operator | 21.6% |
| Logistics planner | 19.1% |
| Electrolysis operator | 18.2% |
| Ore train motorman | 18.2% |
| Seed analyst | 17.6% |
| Loom fixer in a textile mill | 17.1% |
| Milling machine operator | 17.1% |
| Sandfill operator in a mine | 17.1% |
| Skip-hoist operator | 16.3% |
| Aide to a land survey crew | 15.9% |
| Computer tape librarian | 15.9% |
| Die grinder | 15.4% |

The item-missing data pushes the sample size down to as low as 58 (for skycap) and to under 70 for about 27 of 860 occupations.

Rating Procedure

The same procedure to rate occupations was utilized in 2012 as in 1989 on the GSS (Nakao, Hodge, and Teas, 1990; Nakao and Treas, 1990; Nakao and Treas, 1992) and in 1963-1965 in the previous NORC occupational prestige studies (Nakao, Hodge, and Treas, 1990; Siegel, 1971). An "occupational prestige ladder" (actually a series of nine stacked boxes in a vertical column) was laid down in front of the respondent. The boxes were labelled from 1 to 9 and box 1 was also labelled as "BOTTOM," box 5 as "MIDDLE," and box 9 as "TOP." Respondents then were given 90 small cards which each had a single occupational titles listed on it. Cards were in English or Spanish. They were given one card at a time in the preordained order. The interviewer then asked the respondent to "please put the card in the box at the top of the ladder if you think that occupation has the highest possible social standing. Put it in the box of the bottom of the ladder if you think it has the lowest possible social standing. If it belongs somewhere in between, just put it in the box that matches the social standing of the occupation." Both during the placing of the occupational cards and after the task was completed, respondents were told that they could change the placement of an occupation by moving it to a different box. In addition, to the 1-9 ratings on the ladder, occupations that the respondent could not place (usually because they were unfamiliar with the occupation) could be placed to the side and not rated. The occupational cards were then placed by the interviewer into numbered envelopes 1 through 9 matching the boxes on the occupational prestige ladder or in a 10th envelope labelled Don't Know for unratable occupations which were coded as 98 or in an 11th envelope labelled Missing for occupations that were not rated due to break-offs or some other reason. The last envelop was rarely used. The interviewer then placed the 11 envelopes into a large envelope which had the respondent's case ID preprinted on it and the subsample number (1-12) that had been administered. (For the full CAPI questionnaire, see Appendix 1: CAPI Instrument.)

Occupations Rated

A total of 860 occupations were rated. Twenty were core occupations asked of all respondents. The remaining 840 occupation were divided into 12 sub-sets (OCCSAMP) of 70 each and administered to a single sub-sample. Thus all respondents were to rate 90 occupations. Appendix 2: Rated Occupations lists the 20 core occupations asked of all and the additional 70 occupations asked in each sub-sample.

Occupations were selected to cover all 539 occupations (including 4 military codes) in the 2010 Census occupational classification. Of the 860 occupations, 851 were chosen to match specific 2010 occupation codes. The other nine were from titles used in previous occupational prestige studies that could not readily be coded into 2010 Census occupation codes:

Street Corner Drug Dealer
My Own Occupation
Panhandler
Supervisor of Skilled Craftsmen
Unskilled Worker in a Factory
Apprentice to a Master Craftsman
Semi-Skilled Worker

Businessman
Skilled Craftsman in a Factory

Two (Street Corner Drug Dealer and Panhandler) were not recognized occupations, My Own Occupation of course differed across respondents, and the other six were generally too broad to be codeable.

Four main criteria were used in selecting titles for an occupation code: 1) the occupation or occupations well represented the range of occupations that fell into the Census category, 2) more common occupations rather than rarer occupations within the category were preferred, 3) the occupation would be recognized by as many people as possible, and 4) the occupation was used in past occupational studies and was still appropriate presently. Categories that had more titles were those that covered a larger and/or more varied range of constituent occupations.

As Table 2 indicates, most Census occupational codes (63%) were covered by a single occupational title. The rest had two or more occupational titles per Census code with 1% of codes covered by seven or more occupational titles. The occupational titles that were used for each Census code is shown in Appendix 3: Occupational Titles by Census Codes.

Evaluating Occupational Ratings

In addition to examining the general and item-specific non-response above, several other ratings issues were examined. First, the issue of straight lining or limited choice of response options was considered. As Table 3 indicates, there were nine cases in which all occupations were given the same rank. (This excludes cases with missing values for all occupations.) Of these, five had the mid-point value 5 assigned to all occupations. The other four cases either assigned 1 or 2 (the lowest two scores) to all occupations. There was one case that used two ranks - almost all were assigned to 1. There were 8 cases using three ranks. Most spread the values around from Low to middle to high (e.g. 5,6,7; 1,5,9; 2,5,8; 2,4,8, 1,5,8). It was speculated that the five straight liners selecting 5 might have been indicating that they thought of all occupations equally and did not acknowledge a hierarchy. For the five cases using basically 1s or 2s, a meaningful interpretation is harder to discern, but it may be noteworthy that 1 was the rank closest to the respondent (i.e. as typically placed the 1 rank for the respondent would have been nearest to the respondent and the 9 rank the furthest away). Those selecting three ranks generally seemed to be assigning occupations on the scale, but were perhaps simplifying the task by only using three ranks.

Second, the possibility of flipped or reversed scoring was examined. Eleven cases were identified as possibly representing reversed cases. On the social-standing ladder, occupational prestige ran from 1 for bottom to 9 for top. Reversed cases were defined as those in which the scales were flipped and 9 was used to designate the bottom and 1 the top. There were three ways this could have happen. First, respondents could have reversed the scales and thought that 9 was the lowest rank and 1 was the top rank. Second, the interviewer when placing the cards in the nine numbered envelopes could have reversed the process and put 9s in the one envelope, 1s in the nine envelopes and so forth. Finally, coders when removing the occupational title cards from the envelopes could have reversed scores so 9s were entered as 1s, 1s entered as 9s, and so forth. None of these reversals were likely as interviewers had received detailed training on administering this procedure, but all were possible and based on experiences from past rounds it was expected that some would occur. Using the 20 core occupations that were to be rated by all respondents, the first step was to compare the ratings of the three occupations with the highest mean prestige (Banker, Lawyer, and Department Head in a State Government) and the three with lowest mean prestige (Janitor, Telephone Solicitor, Housekeeper in a Private Home). 77.2% of cases rated the high prestige occupations in the top half of the scale and low prestige occupations in the bottom half of the scale, 8.0% rated all six occupations in the lower half, 9.2% rated all in the top half, and 5.6% rated the low prestige occupations in the top and the high prestige occupations in the bottom (the reverse of how most people placed these occupations). Next, the central clustering of occupations among those respondents rating the top occupations high and the bottom occupations low was identified. These represented 45.4% of the 77.2% of cases in the main quadrant. Then looking at the reversed quadrant, there were 12 cases with corresponding, but reversed values. To test whether these were consistent reversals, three moderately higher ranked occupations from the core (Musician in a Symphony Orchestra, Medical Technician, Public Grade School Teacher) and three moderately lower ranked occupations (Assembly Line Worker, Bartender, Bus Driver) were then examined for the 12 cases identified as possible reversals. Of these, 11 rated these six moderately-higher/lower occupations in a way consistent with them being possible reversals. The other case showed an inconsistent pattern. So these 11 cases are considered a possible, even probably reversals. They are flagged by the variable POSOCCRV in the dataset.

However, there is no definitive evidence that these were reverse scored for one of the three possible unintentional reasons delineated above. Some could be substantive or intentional reversals in which respondents meant to rank traditionally-highly-rated occupations towards the bottom and traditionally-lowly-rated occupations near the top. These would not count as reversals in our meaning of the term. Moreover, there could be other cases that were mechanically reversed, but were not identified by this particular diagnostic approach.

Summary

The 2012 GSS occupational prestige study will be used in several ways. First, those occupational titles used in 2012 that were rated in the 1963-65 and/or 1989 can be utilized to study changes in the social standing of those specific occupations. Core occupations asked of all respondents would be most suitable for such analysis. Second, an occupational prestige variable (PRESTG10), based on the 2010 Census classification of occupations (OCC10), will be created. It will be parallel to GSS variables PRESTIGE, based on the 1970 Census codes (OCC) and the 1963-1965 HSR studies, and PRESTG80, based on the 1980 Census codes (OCC80) and 1989 GSS prestige study. Similar occupational prestige variables will be created for the 2010 occupational variables for mother, father, and spouse (MAOCC10, PAOCC10, SPOCC10). Finally, the new occupational prestige variables will be used to create socio-economic index (SEI) variables for respondents, mothers, fathers, and spouses parallel to the existing SEI variables for earlier occupational codes (SEI, MASEI, PASEI, SPSEI).

FI INSTRUCTION: SELECT THE SET OF OCCUPATIONAL CARDS THAT MATCHES THE RESPONDENT'S CASE INFORMATION. THE RESPONDENT IS IN SUBSAMPLE {response to OCCPSAMP}.

SET UP OCCUPATIONAL PRESTIGE LADDER AND BEGIN.

Now let's talk about jobs. Here is a ladder with nine boxes on it, and a card with the name of an occupation on it.

FI INSTRUCTION: HAND FIRST CARD FROM "OCCUPATIONS" STACK TO RESPONDENT.

R3: Info

Please put the card in the box at the top of the ladder if you think that occupation has the highest possible social standing.

Put it in the box at the bottom of the ladder if you think it has the lowest possible social standing.

MDDtoDOC - BALLOT3 2008 English -

If it belongs somewhere in between, just put it in the box that matches the social standing of the occupation.

FI INSTRUCTION: OBSERVE THE RESPONDENT'S PLACEMENT OF THE CARD. IF HE IS UNCERTAIN AS TO HOW TO PERFORM THE TASK, EXPLAIN IT AGAIN, REMAINING CLOSE TO THE WORDING ABOVE. AFTER HE HAS SUCCESSFULLY PLACED THE FIRST CARD, CONTINUE.

R4: Info

Here are some more cards with names of occupations.

FI INSTRUCTION: HAND RESPONDENT CARDS FOR "OCCUPATION" QUESTIONS.

Just put them on the ladder in the boxes that match the social standing they have.

If you want to, you can change your mind about where an occupation belongs, and move its card to a different box.

FI INSTRUCTION: CONTINUE ONLY WHEN THE RESPONDENT HAS COMPLETED PLACING THE ENTIRE DECK OF OCCUPATION CARDS.

R5: Info

Would you like to change the placement of any occupation, or place a card which you couldn't place earlier?

FI INSTRUCTION: ENCOURAGE RESPONDENT TO REVIEW THE ENTIRE ARRAY OF OCCUPATIONS AGAIN TO MAKE CERTAIN S/HE HAS PLACED EACH ONE WHERE S/HE WANTS IT – EVEN TO THE POINT OF GOING THROUGH EACH PILE AGAIN IF S/HE SO WISHES.
